CITY SCHOOLS PREPARED FOR FALL OPENING

Classes To Be Organized Tuesday, Regular Routine Begins Wednesday.

Everything is now in readiness for the opening of the Circleville schools on Tuesday, September 3. Registration was held last spring and almost every pupil has registered, excepting new pupils coming to the school. Schedules also have been completed and when the school doors swing open at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday every student, except for the purchase of books, will be ready to settle down to another nine months of school training.

All indications point to a large enrollment. Three hundred pupils or more are expected to enroll at the high school. The high school doors will open at 8:30 and all pupils will report to the newly painted and decorated auditorium for chapel exercises. At this assembly theassignment of session rooms will be made and the pupils will report to their session rooms, where the schedule of classes will be passed out and then will report to their first period class. Most of the first day of school will be occupied in making assignments and completing organizations for the coming year.

JOURNALISM COURSE

Wednesday classes will start on the regular schedule. According to E. I. Gephart, principal of the high school, the books and courses used this year are practically the same as last. This year public speaking has been discontinued and one period of journalism has been introduced. A dramatic club will be organized and any student in the high school will be eligible. Cicero will also be used this year instead of Virgil. A new book has been selected for use in commercial geography. New editions are replacing books already in use at the school.

Mr. Gephart suggests that all pupils make certain that they obtain the correct edition before they purchase any second hand books. He says that all pupils who have not registered may register at the high school building either Saturday or Monday. Any pupils wishing to confer with Mr. Gephart concerning their schedule may also come Saturday or Monday.

SCHOOL SPEED LIMIT STANDS

Chief Warner Warns Autoists To Observe 15 Mile Gait In Zones.

With the opening of school next week, Chief of Police William Warner today issued a warning to motorists that the 35 miles an hour speed limit in the residential districts of the city does not apply to school disctricts.

In the school zones the speed limit is 15 miles an hour.

According to Nation's Traffic, a magazine which in its latest issue gave some figures taken from the records of the American Road Builders' association, 30,000 school children have been killed in America by traffic in the last five years.

Recently the local automobile club furnished some new stop signs which the police department placed at busy intersections about the city. The signs, police say, were placed about the city for a purpose and must be observed.

Many motorists in the past have made it a practice to stop at intersections only when traffic was coming on the main thoroughfare. At "stop" streets, motorists must stop whether they have a clear passage or not.

GOTHAM FETES GRAF CAPTAIN

Enthusiastic Reception Tendered To Dr. Eckener At New York City.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30— Dr. Hugo Eckner, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, and the man who made the whole world kin, received New York City's official handclasp of greeting this afternoon.

It was a gray day, but there was nothing of gloom in the uproarious reception which this sky conquerer received in recognition of his round the globe flight in three weeks.

The sky scraper of lower Manhattan gave its usual boisterous greeting with salvoes of cheers and "hochs" and clouds of confetti and ticker tape that belched from roof and lofty windows in a pattering storm.

Dr. Eckener came over from Lakehurst, N. J., where the Graf is being groomed for its departure back to Germany, and landed at the battery at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Then began a triumphal procession uptown to city hall where Mayor James J. Walker awaited this latest pioneer in world travel and world kinship to shake hands and, in the name of the city, to extend heartiest congratulations.

Mrs. Martha Weber, 78, widow of Ernest Weber, died Thursday morning at the home of her son, Edward Weber, at Mt. Sterling. She is survived also by another son, Leonard Weber of Columbus, and two daughters, Mrs. W. G. Barnhart, of Columbus and Mrs. C. Lovell, of Chicago, Ill.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at the son's residence at Mt. Sterling. Burial will be at London.

Football Starts Holy Land Riots For Jews, Arabs

CAIRO, Aug. 30(INS)—A football, accidentally kicked into the garden adjoining a Moslem's house in Jerusalem during the course of a game between two Jewish boy teams, was the match which fired the inter-racial explosion in the Holy Land last Friday, according to an American missionary who arrived here today.

The missionary, who was an eye witness of the first outbreak of violence in Jerusalem, described to International News Service the first scenes which led to wholesale killings in numerous cities of the Holy Land.

"The first spark was struck Friday, Aug. 16, when an angry Moslem mob butchered a Jewish youth, a member of a football squad," the missionary said.

"The boys had accidentally kicked the ball into the garden adjoining a Moslem house. The Moselms ran out and attacked the players, one of whom was killed in the fracas.

"Then, at the funeral services held for this youth there was another clash between Moslems and Jews, which became so serious that the Jerusalem police intervened.

"During the next week I saw and heard nothing which indicated there was serious trouble brewing, until last Friday, when I saw a number of Jewish fugitives chased out of Saint Stephens' gate, pursued by an Arab mob armed with knives and clubs.

"The Moslems hid themselves beside the road near the base of the Mount of Olives, from which positions of concealment they rushed down upon the Jericho-rd on the approach of every automobile or other vehicle, killing all Jewish occupants found. Other occupants were not molested. The inter-racial war was then on."

FOG CAUSE OF ROAD MISHAP

William Harrington Painfully Injured When Auto Crashes Into Pole.

Fog, during the early morning hours, was the cause of the automobile accident Friday at 5:30 a. m., in which William Harrington, of E. Franklin-st, suffered a fractured nose and deep lacerations on his face.

Harrington was returning home from work at the Pickaway power plant in Harrison-twp when the accident occurred. The fog was heavy and he saw another car loom up ahead of him, the driver of which failed to see him.

In order to avoid a collision, Harrington drove over to the side of the road and crashed into a telephone pole. The name of the driver of the other car was not learned. Harrington's machine was bady wrecked.

Dr. E. S. Shane attended his injuries.

Mrs. Walter Denman will teach first grade at Pickaway-twp school this year.

CONDITION OF LADY HEATH IS VERY SERIOUS

Britain's Premier Aviatrix Near Death After Crash At Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 30— (INS)—The condition of Lady Mary Heath, England's premier aviatrix, "remains critical in the extreme."

This bulletin was issued today at Lakeside hospital where the famous woman flyer lies near death from injuries received when a plane she was piloting with Irwin Kirk, 28, of Wilmington, O., nose-dived through a factory roof yesterday.

It was further stated that the Englishwoman survived her brain operation successfully and her pulse is somewhat improved although there is still considerable danger of infection.

Little hope was held that Lady Heath will ever be able to fly again if she lives. Hospital attaches, however, declined to state definitely what her condition would be if she survives.

R. H. Bloxham, a visiting air man who said he aided in extricating Lady Heath from the wreckage, told International News Service today that the Englishwoman's injuries appeared to be such that she may be blind for the rest of her life if she lives.

HUSBAND MARRIED

LONDON, Aug. 30—(I. N. S.). The tragic accident which has befallen Lady Mary Heath, Britain's premiere woman flier, in Cleveland, O., will have no effect in bringing about a reconciliation between herself and her multi-millionaire husband, Sir James Heath, prominent British industrialist.

Sir James assured International News Service today that he had no intention of rushing to America to be at his wife's bedside. He indicated strongly that even the fact she is reported to be at the point of death will not influence him to take steps toward a reconciliation.

Sir James and Lady Heath were estranged about a year ago. The industrialist objected to his wife's long absences from home while engaged in her numerous aerial activities, and furnished London society with a sensation by inserting paid advertisements in the newspapers stating he would no longer be responsible for any debts contracted by Lady Heath.

BETRAYS NO ANXIETY

Sir James was interviewed today at the Carlton Club, one of the most exclusive men's clubs in London, of which he has long been a member although he showed considerable concern over his wife's accident and apparent gravity of her condition, he betrayed no anxiety to be at her side.

"I have read of the accident to my wife in the newspapers," Sir James said. "But I do not see any useful purpose in my going to America. Her ladyship has said that she intends to settle in the United States permanently, and I understand she has made application for citizenship.

"Apparently she has no intention of returning to England or to my home. Similarly, I do not intend to go to America. That is all there is to say about the matter."

REEVES' FREEDOM OF BRIEF LENGTH

Freedom for Cary Reeves, released from the Pickaway-co jail earlier in the week on probation, apparently needed celebrating because he is again the guest of Sheriff Frank Davis.

Reeves was arrested at his home in Perry-twp at 10 p. m. Thursday by Deputy Sheriffs John Ward Jr., and Miller Fissell on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. The officers visited his house in response to an S. O. S. call from Mrs. Reeves.

Reeves is periodically lodged in jail under a charge of illegal possession of intoxicants, which Probate Judge E. A. Brown has never heard in an effort to recruit Reeves for the water wagon.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30— (INS.)— Patsy Ruth Miller, motion picture actress, and Tay Garnett, director, will marry Sept. 8. They plan a European honeymoon. Miss Miller gave her age to the marriage license clerk as 25. Garnett is 10 years her senior.

Desert Arabs Are Fanatical Fighters

Preparing Corn For Table Use at Rate of 144,000 Cans Daily is Interesting Process at Local Plant

Undoubtedly many people of Circleville have oftened wondered during the cold winter months, when they are enjoying a nice dish of corn, which has come out of the can, just how this food is cooked and canned. A trip through the Esmeraldo canning factory on Western-ave shows how this food is prepared at the rate of 144,000 cans daily.

When the corn has become ripe, boys and men who are called "jerkers," are sent to the field to remove the corn from the stalks and to load it for the canning factory. Most of the corn brought to the factory is brought in wagons and trucks. The first step is to weigh the corn, and on an average every wagon brought into the factory weighs about two tons net, there are about 35 wagons or about 70 tons of corn canned a day. The corn is unloaded at the factory by two men. A carrier transports it to the distributors, of which there are 20. One man takes care of all these distributors and, keeps the huskers in the husking shed always supplied with plenty of corn.

MACHINE HUSKING

The corn then goes to the husking machines. One husking machine husks at the rate of 100 ears of corn per minute, while 17 other machines husk at the rate of 50 per minute. The corn is fed into these machines by men and then is carefully sorted and cleaned by 40 women who are employed to do this work. The husks from the corn are carried to a huge pile in the rear of the factory and taken care of by three men. This pile is later bought by cattle buyers who use this as feed for cattle.

After the corn has been cleaned by the women it is taken to a machine which thoroughly washes it. A man is also stationed here to pick out the bad ears. The corn is then sent to the cutting machine where the corn is cut off the cob. These cobs are taken to wagons and are hauled away by farmers of Pickaway-co. The corn is again carried to another washing machine and washed. From here the corn is taken to the mixing machine.

The mixer is probably the most essential machine in the canning factory. The mixer runs automtically and allows certain proportions of sugar water and salt to enter the mixer. The corn is heated to a temperature of 190 degrees farenheit in the mixer and then transferred to a machine called the "filler." The filler is the machine which fills the cans with corn. The cans slide under a capping machine which puts the tops on the cans, which are put in large iron crates to be cooked. A crate is capable of holding 360 cans.

COOKED IN RETORTS

As soon as the crates have been filled they are taken to the cooker, called the retort. A retort holds three crates or 1080 cans of corn. The corn is cooked for 70 minutes at 150 degrees farenheit in these retorts. There are 16 retorts, which are capable of cooking 17,280 cans in 70 minutes, although not all these retorts are cooking at the same time.

After the corn has been cooked, it is removed from the retort and taken to the cooler. The cooler is composed of a long narrow ditch filled with cold water. It takes 24 minutes for a crate to pass through the cooler, and by this time the cans are cooled off. The crate is then taken out of the cooler and sent to the warehouse where the cans are crated, 24 to a case, 15 cases in a crate.

According to J. I. Smith, owner and manager of the factory there were 240 cans of corn canned per minute at the factory Thursday. This would be ten cases per minute and 6000 cases per day. There are about 100 employees at the factory and all are kept busy, as things move fast at the factory. Later in the season this canned corn is labeled by means of a labeling machine and sent to all corners of the United States.

18 MORE DIE IN RACE RIOT

Bitter Fighting Continues Between Jews and Arabs In Palestine.

LONDON, Aug. 30.— Eighteen more persons—12 Arabs and six Jews were reported killed in fresh outbreaks in Palestine, according to advices received here this afternoon.

The Arabs were said to have been killed by British troops in an attack at Surbaher and Lifta.

A Central News telegram from Jerusalem said the Jews were killed in an Arab attack upon the Jewish quarter at Safed, 100 miles north of Jerusalem, near the sea of Galilee.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 30.—Although comparative quiet ruled throughout the Holy Land today, the populace remained in a state of extreme tension as British authorities worked to the full extent of their power to put down the Moslem rebellion reported to be spreading throughout the entire near east.

The population is even more uneasy than it has been during the last week of massacres and bloody riots between Arabs and Jews. Today is the Moslem sabbath, and it is feared it may prove to be the signal for a general advance upon Jerusalem by the unruly Arab tribes from villages surrounding the Holy city.

But in spite of his sanguine statement, the fears of the Jewish residents of Palestine have not been abated, for sinister reports continue to come in of Arab activity throughout Syria and trans-Jordania. While several warlike Moslem tribes are reported to have been routed by the British at several points along the trans-Jordan border, there are still rumors of a widespread advance of Arab tribes from outlying sections, and Jerusalem is deeply fearful that any moment may see a general incursion across the border.

NEW SIGN ERECTED

A new sign was erected in front of the Miller-Jones shoe store Thursday morning and was painted by Edward Van Winkle, local painter. The letters are 12 inches high and are painted a deep orange with a background of black.

Van Winkle has also painted a sign for Elliot Voll and T. K. Brunner.

BOUND TO GRAND JURY UNDER BOND

Orren Rinehart, who was arrested by Deputy Miller Fissell Monday on a charge of breaking and entering into the toolshed belonging to the Madison-twp trustees and alleged to have stolen gasoline, inter tube and an auto timer, was given a hearing before Squire Friece Thursday. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was bound over to the October grand jury under $1000 bond. In default of bond he was committed to the county jail.

Henry Freese and his brother Richard Freese of Pittsburgh will return home Saturday after spending their vacation with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolp Gessely of E. Franklin-st during the month of August.

WOODEN SHIP SUNK IN CRASH WITH TANKER

Worst Pacific Ocean Disaster In Recent Years Occurs In Dense Fog.

By HARRY WADE

Passenger aboard the ill-fated Steamer, San Juan, rescued By Steamer Munami

(Copyright, 1929, by I. N. S.)

ABOARD STEAMER MUNAMI OFF CALIFORNIA COAST, Aug. 30—A crash, wildest confusion and I was in the water.

These are my fleeting impressions of the sinking of the San Juan.

The water was very cold. I do not know just how long it was before I was picked up by the boat from the Munami.

Highest praise is due the crew and every department of the Munami for the work in manning the boats and saving the survivors of the San Juan.

Especially has Captain Rigg of the Munami handled the entire situation in a thoroughly seamanlike manner.

The San Juan went down in three minutes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—The death toll in the sinking of the passenger steamer San Juan early today off Pigeon Point may reach three score or more.

A dense fog today shrouded in uncertainty the fate of 74 passengers and members of the ill-fated San Francisco to Los Angeles steamer which sank 12 miles off the coast of Central California, three minutes after being in collision with the tanker S. C. T. Dodd.

Seven hours after the collision only 36 of the 110 persons known to have been on the ship had been definitely accounted for.

Of this number 27, many badly injured, were enroute to San Francisco on the disabled tanker Dodd and were aboard the steamer Munami which was first to answer the distress call sent out by the Dodd immediately after the collision.

WOMEN, CHILDREN ON SHIP

Many of the victims of the worst marine disaster in recent years on the Pacific were women and children. The San Juan carried 65 passengers and a crew of 45.

Radio advices failed to indicate how many of those known to be saved were passengers and how many were members of the crew.

In addition to the Munami, the motor ship Frank Lynch was patroling the vicinity of the wreck.

HOG CHOLERA GRAVE MENACE

Outbreak of Disease Here Shows Need For Serum, Lewis Says.

Dr. J. B. Hollenbeck, a representative of the Federal Bureau of Animal Industry, spent Tuesday with H. S. Lewis, county agent, in conducting post-mortems on sick hogs to check the presence of cholera.

The first outbreaks of the cholera reported in the county occurred in the district between Circleville and Kingston about threshing time. This outbreak was soon followed by another outbreak around Five Points in Monroe-twp. The outbreak under special consideration, Friday, Aug. 30, was about Kinderhook. Post-mortems conducted by Dr. Hollenbeck gave very convincing evidence of the presence of true hog cholera infection.

Pickaway-co farmers who have not treated their pigs and shoats can well-afford to take this precautionary method of protecting themselves against losses from cholera.

The administration of hog cholera virus and serum through a competent veterinarian is the practical method through which hog cholera hazards may be checked. Each year at about this time Pickaway-co farmers suffer quite a financial loss through not having insured their pig crop against this hog disease through proper immunization.

TWO ARE CHARGED WITH NON-SUPPORT

Gard Hawk of Chillicothe, was brought to Circleville by Deputies John Ward Jr., and Miller Fissell Thursday on a charge of non-support. He was arrested for Pickaway-co authorities by the sheriff of Ross-co. Hawk is in the county jail and will be given a hearing before Judge Brown.

Arba Morrow, of Newark, was returned to Circleville Thursday by Deputy John Ward Jr., on a non-support charge. He is now in th county jail pending a hearing in probate court.

TWO MARRIED AT OHIO FAIR

Wedding In Church Cook Tent Is Feature of Sesqui Exposition.

OHIO STATE FAIR GROUNDS, Columbus, O., Aug. 30—A new attendance record for this $200,000,000 "show" today had been hung up as a result of 109,023 persons passing through the iron gates here yesterday, and a bigger crowd was expected this afternoon and tonight.

In conjunction with other things which are liable to happen when 109,023 persons elbow their way into a small space of 115-acres Dan Cupid, archer and matchmaker extraordinary, came to the fore and William Meyers, 21, of Westerville and Miss Ruth Mowry, 18, of Lancaster, were united in wedlock.

The marriage took place in a tent in which a north side church had set up a restaurant with a background of kitchen utensils, stacks of bread, the sizzling of fried meat and the smell of hamburger. Rev. John A. Toy officiated.

Governor's day drew many high personages to the Buckeye state's "mardi gras." The Navy's "Nine High Hats" nine young flyers who can make their airplanes do as they will, were among the elite. Former Governor Vic A. Donahey also attend the Fair.

The Fair will be brought to a close tomorrow afternoon; the many exhibitors will strike their stakes to move onward; and the greatest spectacle of its kind in the world will have been closed, leaving only the memory of a grand and glorious week.

The industrialist objected to his wife's long absences from home while engaged in her numerous aerial activities, and furnished London society with a sensation by inserting paid advertisements in the newspapers stating he would no longer be responsible for any debts contracted by Lady Heath.

BETRAYS NO ANXIETY

Sir James was interviewed today at the Carlton Club, one of the most exclusive men's clubs in London, of which he has long been a member although he showed considerable concern over his wife's accident and apparent gravity of her condition, he betrayed no anxiety to be at her side.

"I have read of the accident to my wife in the newspapers," Sir James said. "But I do not see any useful purpose in my going to America. Her ladyship has said that she intends to settle in the United States permanently, and I understand she has made application for citizenship.

"Apparently she has no intention of returning to England or to my home. Similarly, I do not intend to go to America. That is all there is to say about the matter."

REEVES' FREEDOM OF BRIEF LENGTH

Freedom for Cary Reeves, released from the Pickaway-co jail earlier in the week on probation, apparently needed celebrating because he is again the guest of Sheriff Frank Davis.

Reeves was arrested at his home in Perry-twp at 10 p. m. Thursday by Deputy Sheriffs John Ward Jr., and Miller Fissell on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. The officers visited his house in response to an S. O. S. call from Mrs. Reeves.

Reeves is periodically lodged in jail under a charge of illegal possession of intoxicants, which Probate Judge E. A. Brown has never heard in an effort to recruit Reeves for the water wagon.

Desert Arabs Are Fanatical Fighters

Desert Arabs of the type seen above are still active in Palestine following the sharp fighting around Jerusalem, in which twelve Americans were killed. Latest reports indicate that the revolt is spreading and strong British reinforcements are daily arriving from Egypt.

Preparing Corn For Table Use at Rate of 144,000 Cans Daily is Interesting Process at Local Plant

Undoubtedly many people of Circleville have oftened wondered during the cold winter months, when they are enjoying a nice dish of corn, which has come out of the can, just how this food is cooked and canned. A trip through the Esmeraldo canning factory on Western-ave shows how this food is prepared at the rate of 144,000 cans daily.

When the corn has become ripe, boys and men who are called "jerkers," are sent to the field to remove the corn from the stalks and to load it for the canning factory. Most of the corn brought to the factory is brought in wagons and trucks. The first step is to weigh the corn, and on an average every wagon brought into the factory weighs about two tons net, there are about 35 wagons or about 70 tons of corn canned a day. The corn is unloaded at the factory by two men. A carrier transports it to the distributors, of which there are 20. One man takes care of all these distributors and, keeps the huskers in the husking shed always supplied with plenty of corn.

MACHINE HUSKING

The corn then goes to the husking machines. One husking machine husks at the rate of 100 ears of corn per minute, while 17 other machines husk at the rate of 50 per minute. The corn is fed into these machines by men and then is carefully sorted and cleaned by 40 women who are employed to do this work. The husks from the corn are carried to a huge pile in the rear of the factory and taken care of by three men. This pile is later bought by cattle buyers who use this as feed for cattle.

After the corn has been cleaned by the women it is taken to a machine which thoroughly washes it. A man is also stationed here to pick out the bad ears. The corn is then sent to the cutting machine where the corn is cut off the cob. These cobs are taken to wagons and are hauled away by farmers of Pickaway-co. The corn is again carried to another washing machine and washed. From here the corn is taken to the mixing machine.

The mixer is probably the most essential machine in the canning factory. The mixer runs automtically and allows certain proportions of sugar water and salt to enter the mixer. The corn is heated to a temperature of 190 degrees farenheit in the mixer and then transferred to a machine called the "filler." The filler is the machine which fills the cans with corn. The cans slide under a capping machine which puts the tops on the cans, which are put in large iron crates to be cooked. A crate is capable of holding 360 cans.

COOKED IN RETORTS

As soon as the crates have been filled they are taken to the cooker, called the retort. A retort holds three crates or 1080 cans of corn. The corn is cooked for 70 minutes at 150 degrees farenheit in these retorts. There are 16 retorts, which are capable of cooking 17,280 cans in 70 minutes, although not all these retorts are cooking at the same time.

After the corn has been cooked, it is removed from the retort and taken to the cooler. The cooler is composed of a long narrow ditch filled with cold water. It takes 24 minutes for a crate to pass through the cooler, and by this time the cans are cooled off. The crate is then taken out of the cooler and sent to the warehouse where the cans are crated, 24 to a case, 15 cases in a crate.

According to J. I. Smith, owner and manager of the factory there were 240 cans of corn canned per minute at the factory Thursday. This would be ten cases per minute and 6000 cases per day. There are about 100 employees at the factory and all are kept busy, as things move fast at the factory. Later in the season this canned corn is labeled by means of a labeling machine and sent to all corners of the United States.

18 MORE DIE IN RACE RIOT

Bitter Fighting Continues Between Jews and Arabs In Palestine.

LONDON, Aug. 30.— Eighteen more persons—12 Arabs and six Jews were reported killed in fresh outbreaks in Palestine, according to advices received here this afternoon.

The Arabs were said to have been killed by British troops in an attack at Surbaher and Lifta.

A Central News telegram from Jerusalem said the Jews were killed in an Arab attack upon the Jewish quarter at Safed, 100 miles north of Jerusalem, near the sea of Galilee.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 30.—Although comparative quiet ruled throughout the Holy Land today, the populace remained in a state of extreme tension as British authorities worked to the full extent of their power to put down the Moslem rebellion reported to be spreading throughout the entire near east.

The population is even more uneasy than it has been during the last week of massacres and bloody riots between Arabs and Jews. Today is the Moslem sabbath, and it is feared it may prove to be the signal for a general advance upon Jerusalem by the unruly Arab tribes from villages surrounding the Holy city.

But in spite of his sanguine statement, the fears of the Jewish residents of Palestine have not been abated, for sinister reports continue to come in of Arab activity throughout Syria and trans-Jordania. While several warlike Moslem tribes are reported to have been routed by the British at several points along the trans-Jordan border, there are still rumors of a widespread advance of Arab tribes from outlying sections, and Jerusalem is deeply fearful that any moment may see a general incursion across the border.

NEW SIGN ERECTED

A new sign was erected in front of the Miller-Jones shoe store Thursday morning and was painted by Edward Van Winkle, local painter. The letters are 12 inches high and are painted a deep orange with a background of black.

Van Winkle has also painted a sign for Elliot Voll and T. K. Brunner.

BOUND TO GRAND JURY UNDER BOND

Orren Rinehart, who was arrested by Deputy Miller Fissell Monday on a charge of breaking and entering into the toolshed belonging to the Madison-twp trustees and alleged to have stolen gasoline, inter tube and an auto timer, was given a hearing before Squire Friece Thursday. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was bound over to the October grand jury under $1000 bond. In default of bond he was committed to the county jail.

500 DIE IN FLOOD

BOMBAY, Aug. 30.—(INS.)—Five hundred persons have lost their lives in the flooding of the Indus river owing to a break in the Shyok ice dam, it was reported here today. Thousands of head of cattle and other livestock have been lost, while damage to crops and property is extremely heavy.

HOG CHOLERA GRAVE MENACE

Outbreak of Disease Here Shows Need For Serum, Lewis Says.

Dr. J. B. Hollenbeck, a representative of the Federal Bureau of Animal Industry, spent Tuesday with H. S. Lewis, county agent, in conducting post-mortems on sick hogs to check the presence of cholera.

The first outbreaks of the cholera reported in the county occurred in the district between Circleville and Kingston about threshing time. This outbreak was soon followed by another outbreak around Five Points in Monroe-twp. The outbreak under special consideration, Friday, Aug. 30, was about Kinderhook. Post-mortems conducted by Dr. Hollenbeck gave very convincing evidence of the presence of true hog cholera infection.

Pickaway-co farmers who have not treated their pigs and shoats can well afford to take this precautionary method of protecting themselves against losses from cholera.

The administration of hog cholera virus and serum through a competent veterinarian is the practical method through which hog cholera hazards may be checked. Each year at about this time Pickaway-co farmers sufier quite a financial loss through not having insured their pig crop against this hog disease through proper immunization.

TWO ARE CHARGED WITH NON-SUPPORT

Gard Hawk of Chillicothe, was brought to Circleville by Deputies John Ward Jr., and Miller Fissell Thursday on a charge of non-support. He was arrested for Pickaway-co authorities by the sheriff of Ross-co. Hawk is in the county jail and will be given a hearing before Judge Brown.

Arba Morrow, of Newark, was returned to Circleville Thursday by Deputy John Ward Jr., on a non-support charge. He is now in th county jail pending a hearing in probate court.

Henry Freese and his brother Richard Freese of Pittsburgh will return home Saturday after spending their vacation with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolp Gessely of E. Franklin-st during the month of August.

WOODEN SHIP SUNK IN CRASH WITH TANKER

Worst Pacific Ocean Disaster In Recent Years Occurs In Dense Fog.

By HARRY WADE
Passenger aboard the ill-fated Steamer, San Jaun, rescued By Steamer Munami

(Copyright, 1929, by I. N. S.)

ABOARD STEAMER MUNAMI OFF CALIFORNIA COAST, Aug. 30—A crash, wildest confusion and I was in the water.

These are my fleeting impressions of the sinking of the San Juan.

The water was very cold. I do not know just how long it was before I was picked up by the boat from the Munami.

Highest praise is due the crew and every department of the Munami for the work in manning the boats and saving the survivors of the San Juan.

Especially has Captain Illig of the Munami handled the entire situation in a thoroughly seamanlike manner.

The San Juan went down in three minutes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—The death toll in the sinking of the passenger steamer San Juan early today off Pigeon Point may reach three score or more.

A dense fog today shrouded in uncertainty the fate of 74 passengers and members of the ill-fated San Francisco to Los Angeles steamer which sank 12 miles off the coast of Central California three minutes after being in collision with the tanker S. C. T. Dodd.

Seven hours after the collision only 36 of the 110 persons known to have been on the San Juan had been definitely accounted for.

Of this number 27, many badly injured, were enroute to San Francisco on the disabled tanker Dodd and were aboard the steamer Munami which was first to answer the distress call sent out by the Dodd immediately after the collision.

WOMEN, CHILDREN ON SHIP

Many of the victims of the worst marine disaster in recent years on the Pacific were women and children. The San Juan carried 65 passengers and a crew of 45.

Radio advices failed to indicate how many of those known to be saved were passengers and how many were members of the crew.

In addition to the Munami, the motor ship Frank Lynch was patroling the vicinity of the wreck

TWO MARRIED AT OHIO FAIR

Wedding In Church Cook Tent Is Feature of State's Exposition.

OHIO STATE FAIR GROUNDS, Columbus, O., Aug. 30—A new attendance record for this $100,000,000 "show" today had been hung up as a result of 109,023 persons passing through the iron gates here yesterday, and a bigger crowd was expected this afternoon and tonight.

In conjunction with other things which are liable to happen when 109,023 persons elbow their way into a small space of 115-acres Dan Cupid, archer and matchmaker extraordinary, came to the fore and William Meyers, 21, of Westerville and Miss Ruth Mowry, 18, of Lancaster, were united in wedlock.

The marriage took place in a tent in which a north side church had set up a restaurant with a background of kitchen utensils, stacks of bread, the sizzling of fried meat and the smell of hamburger, Rev. John A. Toy officiated.

Governor's day drew many high personages to the Buckeye state's "madri gras." The Navy's "Nine High Hats" nine young flyers who can make their airplanes do as they will, were among the elite. Former Governor Vic A. Donahey also attend the Fair.

The Fair will be brought to a close tomorrow afternoon; the many exhibitors will strike their stakes to move onward; and the greatest spectacle of its kind in the world will have been closed, leaving only the memory of a grand and glorious week.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN GRATEFUL TO SPINAGO

New Tonic Containing Spinach Is a Medicine For the Whole Family. Circleville Boy Sings Its Praises.

Guard the health of the children at this time of year. Indigestion and constipation, those two most persistent enemies of the well-being of any young person, are most prevalent as summer draws to a close and school opening looms up right ahead. Mothers and fathers in this city and vicinity have found that there is one medicine which can be counted upon not only to aid digestion and keep the system clean but to also build up the bodies of their children. That medicine is Spinago, the new tonic containing spinach which is being introduced to the public at The Mykrantz Pharmacy in Circleville A carefully selected assortment of medically valuable roots, herbs and barks, each one working separately and in co-operation with the others gives Spinago the power to perform the duty of regulating the stomach and bowels. Concentrated spinach, which is contained in every bottle of Spinago serves to nourish the body, clean, freshen and enrichen the blood, and to build it up to health and fitness.

SANFORD MORRIS.

Mr. William Morris, 118 E. Water St., Circleville, took two bottles of Spinago and was so enthusiastic over the new health it brought him that he started his 12-year-old son, Sanford on the treatment. Young Mr. Morris speaks as follows regarding this master medicine:

"It wasn't so long ago that I had to be awful careful of what I ate. Daddy didn't allow me to eat anything I really liked because it upset me so. There were only a few foods which digested in my stomach and didn't cause me trouble. Candy, sodas and things like that which every boy wants, hurt me terribly and kept me in pain for a long time after I ate them. My face was broken out with pimples, I didn't have any pep and felt tired all the time. I lost all my appetite and couldn't seem to gain any weight. Daddy kept filling me up with medicines for indigestion and constipation. They all tasted bad enough to do me some good but I didn't get any better.

"Then one day daddy told me that he was going to let me take some of the medicine that did him so much good and he brought me a bottle of Spinago. It sure did the work, that's all I can say. I don't have any more of those pains I used to have after eating. I don't have to be careful of what I eat. Candy, sodas and things I like don't give me trouble any more. My face has cleared up. No more pimples. I have plenty of pep and eat like a horse. And I don't fnind taking Spinago—it tastes sort of good, and it sure made a new boy out of me."

Mr. Morris and his son are not the only ones who have discovered the worth of Spinago. Thousands of men, women and children daily praise and thank this tonic for benefits they have derived from it. It is neither an adult's or a children's medicine—it is a medicine for man, woman and child—a medicine for the whole family.

Spinago is being introduced daily to hundreds of Circleville people at The Mykrantz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St. Spinago is also sold by all other good druggists in this section.—Adv.

A Mouse Farm

Have you ever heard of a mouse farm? There is one at Rayleigh, in Essex, England, where mice are reared just as cattle and sheep are on ordinary farms. There are 50,000 mice, and of nearly every color. Yet, although there are so many, Mr. Tuck, the farmer, can put his hands on any one of them at a moment's notice. About three hundred young ones are born every day, and it takes five hours to feed them all. They are sold to colleges and hospitals for experiments.

SUPPOSE you are today paying 50c a tube for your tooth paste (and there are many very good dentifrices selling today at that price).

Suppose, like most people, you buy about twelve tubes during a year. Now if you knew that you could buy as good a dentifrice as can be made and still save each year the price of 25 loaves of bread or 60 bars of soap or 40 pounds of sugar or a box of fine cigars—could you conscientiously fail to take advantage of such an opportunity?

That is exactly what you do when you buy Listerine Tooth Paste at 25c for a large tube. Figure it out for yourself.

Colonial Homes Surely Constructed to Endure

Those who are familiar with the construction methods employed by New England coast house builders of the Colonial period are generally impressed by the foundation work. Today, after a century or more, one may find these foundations unshaken. Labor was cheap in earlier times; construction material close at hand. Perhaps such massive bases for the superstructure were needlessly extravagant, yet one must admire the honest work that has stood the test of time.

At East Winthrop, Maine, there stands a massive Colonial dwelling 107 years old, that has one of these typical foundations. It is formed of enormous granite slabs which are laid up three feet thick. It is tradition among descendants of the original owners that three yokes of oxen were required to haul some of these great stones to the spot.

Quite frequently one will come across one of these Colonial houses with stone chimney bases 20 feet square while on the ground floor there will be tunnels through the heart of the chimney, forming unique hallways from one part of the main floor to another. Foundations and chimneys were built to withstand the onslaughts of floods, earthquakes and centuries. Fire occasionally razed cleanly one of these Colonial dwellings, yet the bond of mortis always necessary to bear part their load is masonry.

Tinned Stuff Used in Navy

More than 10,000,000 pounds of canned goods are consumed by the sailors of the United States navy in a year. Canned tomatoes take the lead in vegetables, followed by beans. Among fruits, peaches lead followed closely by pineapple, then come prunes, applesauce, apricots pears, figs and raisins. Figs are relatively new in the canned goods products, but the navy uses them to the extent of 540,000 pounds annually.

Ant-Killer Uses Pincers for Grinding Its Victims

Among the myriad forms of animal life are to be found many that tax the credibility. One is a creature only about three inches long which bears a superficial resemblance to the spider and also to both the scorpion and the vinegerone. Frequently it is mistaken for one of them, but its correct pseudonym is ant-killer, a name the implications of which are fully borne out by its behavior toward those little insects. Its reason writes C. T. Reed in Nature Magazine, for killing the ants, and nearly all the other small animals chiefly arthropodans, is not pure love of destruction.

After killing the insects it thoroughly grinds the bodies in its powerful and needle-like chelae, which project forward in front of the small head. Then through a toothless mouth, scarcely bigger than a small pinhead, it sucks the juices of the bodies of the victims.

The ant-killer is dreaded by the Mexicans as an enemy more venomous than the rattlesnake. As a matter of fact it has no venom and is harmless, except for the rather painful wound that it might inflict with its sharp, strong, tonic acid-covered pincers. These large spider-like animals are widely distributed throughout arid tropical and semi-tropical regions.

THEATRES

ROMANCE OF AIR

A charming romance set amid breath-taking thrills furnished by daring air exploits is "The Flying Marine," the Columbia production synchronized with talking and music, which opens at the Cliftona theatre Friday.

This picture is more than an airplane picture. It has a tender love story combined with an underlying theme of brotherly sacrifice. Two brothers are in love with the same girl. The younger brother, a careless, reckless, irresponsible youth, wins the girl after a dashing, impetuous courtship. The older brother, a steady and earnest worker with a sterling character stands aside for the kid's happiness. It doesn't take the girl long to realize that she has made the wrong choice. She tells the older brother that it is he that she has loved all along. Just as they are about to break the news to the younger brother, portrayed by Ben Lyon, a situation arises which results in one of the most unusual and spectacular climaxes ever witnessed on the screen.

Intensely dramatic sequences are in talking. This adds to the general merit of the picture because Ben Lyon, Shirley Mason and Jason Robards have marvelous speaking voices. An entertaining evening is in store for you when you see this film because it is a delight to the ear as well as to the eye. Robert S. Rogell directed.

"FREEDOM OF THE PRESS"

Marceline Day and Lewis Stone are starred at the Grand theater Friday in "Freedom of the Press" a drama in which a newspaper owner and the power behind the underworld of a big city is murdered. His son finds it hard to carry on a crusade against the corrupt politician who was guardian of the girl he loved. A talking comedy and the ninth chapter of "The Final Reckoning" are also on the bill.

Alligator Flesh Is Edible

Alligator flesh is white and tender, but it has a musky taste and is therefore not relished by most people. Some of the Indians were very fond of it.

"It wasn't so long ago that I had to be awful careful of what I ate. Daddy didn't allow me to eat anything I really liked because it upset me so. There were only a few foods which digested in my stomach and didn't cause me trouble. Candy, sodas and things like that which every boy wants, hurt me terribly and kept me in pain for a long time after I ate them. My face was broken out with pimples, I didn't have any pep and felt tired all the time. I lost all my appetite and couldn't seem to gain any weight. Daddy kept filling me up with medicines for indigestion and constipation. They all tasted bad enough to do me some good but I didn't get any better.

"Then one day daddy told me that he was going to let me take some of the medicine that did him so much good and he brought me a bottle of Spinago. It sure did the work, that's all I can say. I don't have any more of those pains I used to have after eating. I don't have to be careful of what I eat. Candy, sodas and things I like don't give me trouble any more. My face has cleared up. No more pimples. I have plenty of pep and eat like a horse. And I don't mind taking Spinago—it tastes sort of good, and it sure made a new boy out of me."

Mr. Morris and his son are not the only ones who have discovered the worth of Spinago. Thousands of men, women and children daily praise and thank this tonic for benefits they have derived from it. It is neither an adult's or a children's medicine—it is a medicine for man, woman and child—a medicine for the whole family.

Spinago is being introduced daily to hundreds of Circleville people at The Mykrantz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St. Spinago is also sold by all other good druggists in this section.—Adv.

A Mouse Farm

Have you ever heard of a mouse farm? There is one at Rayleigh, in Essex, England, where mice are reared just as cattle and sheep are on ordinary farms. There are 50,000 mice, and of nearly every color. Yet, although there are so many, Mr. Tuck, the farmer, can put his hands on any one of them at a moment's notice. About three hundred young ones are born every day, and it takes five hours to feed them all. They are sold to colleges and hospitals for experiments.

Hush, Daddy!

Father and mother took little Mary to church. When the congregation rose to sing father and mother joined in the singing. Little Mary, who was standing next to her father, whispered to him "Hush, daddy, don't sing too loud; somebody'll hear you."

Notice to the public

SUPPOSE you are today paying 50c a tube for your tooth paste (and there are many very good dentifrices selling today at that price).

Suppose, like most people, you buy about twelve tubes during a year. Now if you knew that you could buy as good a dentifrice as can be made and still save each year the price of 25 loaves of bread or 60 bars of soap or 40 pounds of sugar or a box of fine cigars—could you conscientiously fail to take advantage of such an opportunity?

That is exactly what you do when you buy Listerine Tooth Paste at 25c for a large tube. Figure it out for yourself.

Colonial Homes Surely Constructed to Endure

Those who are familiar with the construction methods employed by New England coast house builders of the Colonial period are generally impressed by the foundation work. Today, after a century or more, one may find these foundations unshaken. Labor was cheap in earlier times; construction material close at hand. Perhaps such massive bases for the superstructure were needlessly extravagant, yet one must admire the honest work that has stood the test of time.

At East Winthrop, Maine, there stands a massive Colonial dwelling, 107 years old, that has one of these typical foundations. It is formed of enormous granite slabs which are laid up three feet thick. It is tradition among descendants of the original owners that three yokes of oxen were required to haul some of these great stones to the spot.

Quite frequently one will come across one of these Colonial houses with stone chimney bases 20 feet square while on the ground floor there will be tunnels through the heart of the chimney, forming unique hallways from one part of the main floor to another. Foundations and chimneys were built to withstand the onslaughts of floods, earthquakes and centuries. Fire occasionally razed cleanly one of these Colonial dwellings, yet the hand of man is always necessary to tear apart that honest masonry.

Radio Is Used

The Loomis Radio college says that radio waves, using reflected sound waves as recorded in a seismograph, are used quite successfully in locating oil, or rather the salt domes under which oil is generally found. Dynamite explosions are employed for obtaining the sound waves.

Tinned Stuff Used in Navy

More than 10,000,000 pounds of canned goods are consumed by the sailors of the United States navy in a year. Canned tomatoes take the lead in vegetables, followed by beans. Among fruits, peaches lead, followed closely by pineapple, then come prunes, applesauce, apricots, pears, figs and raisins. Figs are relatively new in the canned goods products, but the navy uses them to the extent of 540,000 pounds annually.

Ant-Killer Uses Pincers for Grinding Its Victims

Among the myriad forms of animal life are to be found many that tax the credibility. One is a creature only about three inches long which bears a superficial resemblance to the spider and also to both the scorpion and the vinegerone. Frequently it is mistaken for one of them, but its correct pseudonym is ant-killer, a name the implications of which are fully borne out by its behavior toward those little insects. Its reason writes C. T. Reed in Nature Magazine, for killing the ants, and nearly all the other small animals chiefly arthropodans, is not pure love of destruction.

After killing the insects it thoroughly grinds the bodies in its powerful and needle-like chelae which project forward in front of the small head. Then through a toothless mouth, scarcely bigger than a small pinhead, it sucks the juices of the bodies of the victims.

The ant-killer is dreaded by the Mexicans as an enemy more venomous than the rattlesnake. As a matter of fact, it has no venom and is harmless, except for the rather painful wound that it might inflict with its sharp, strong, formic acid covered pincers. These large spider-like animals are widely distributed throughout arid tropical and semitropical regions.

THEATRES

ROMANCE OF AIR

A charming romance set amid breath-taking thrills furnished by daring air exploits is "The Flying Marine," the Columbia production synchronized with talking and music, which opens at the Cliftona theatre Friday.

This picture is more than an airplane picture. It has a tender love story combined with an underlying theme of brotherly sacrifice. Two brothers are in love with the same girl. The younger brother, a careless, reckless, irresponsible youth, wins the girl after a dashing, impetuous courtship. The older brother, a steady and earnest worker with a sterling character stands aside for the kid's happiness It doesn't take the girl long to realize that sh has made the wrong choice. She tells the older brother that it is he that she has loved all along. Just as they are about to break the news to the younger brother, portrayed by Ben Lyon, a situation arises which results in one of the most unusual and spectacular climaxes ever witnessed on the screen.

Intensely dramatic sequences are in talking. This adds to the general merit of the picture because Ben Lyon, Shirley Mason and Jason Robards have marvelous speaking voices. An entertaining evening is in store for you when you see this film because it is a delight to the ear as well as to the eye. Robert S. Rogell directed.

"FREEDOM OF THE PRESS"

Marceline Day and Lewis Stone are starred at the Grand theater Friday in "Freedom of the Press" a drama in which a newspaper owner and the power behind the underworld of a big city is murdered. His son finds it hard to carry on a crusade against the corrupt politician who was guardian of the girl he loved. A talking comedy and the ninth chapter of "The Final Reckoning" are also on the bill.

THE PLACE OF THE DIRIGIBLE

The globe-circling flight of the Graf Zeppelin is a spectacular and interesting affair—the sort of thing that may well take hold of the public imagination and restore the dirigible to the place it formerly held in the minds of men.

A dozen years ago all speculations about the long-distance commercial aviation dealt exclusively with dirigibles. It was not imagined that the airplane could ever be developed to the point where it could carry enough passengers and cargo to pay its way as a means of transportation.

The development of the airplane however, has been so rapid that the dirigible has been side-tracked—in the popular mind, at any rate. The great achievements of the airplane have made the dirigible look slow, cumbersome and expensive.

There is still a wide field of usefulness for the dirigible, however. The round-the-world flight of the Graf Zeppelin may focus public attention anew on this fact. If so, it will have been a useful trip.

LABOR DAY

Like many of our holidays the original purpose of this day has been lost sight of to a considerable extent. Throngs that fill the railroad stations, roads crowded with automobiles, would suggest that the day had been dedicated to play rather than labor.

To the Knights of Labor we owe the first move to have one day set apart for the claims of labor. Sept. 5, 1882, a great parade was organized by the Central Labor Union of New York City. Later Workingmen's organizations began an agitation to induce state legislatures to declare a legal holiday in the interests of labor. Colorado was the first to enact a law and was followed by other states.

Much has been accomplished in promoting the rights of labor, but there is still a field for the most wise and fair minded administrators and the most loyal and patriotic citizens in efforts to promote justice and a more enlightened policy in the relations of capital and labor. Also there is a wide field for improving the conditions of those outside the ranks of organization, those who are doing a variety of useful and constructive tasks in domestic service of different sorts. Let us remember the children who are already wage earners and all undemanding workers who should be considered that they be not exploited.

Underneath it all there is the thought of the great rhythmic element of life, recurrence of toil, of accomplishment, of playing our part in the orchestra of eternal harmonies. Let us be sure that each one of us in his place is contributing in his own way to this mighty workshop of life. Let us rejoice that we are members of this glorious fellowship.

Thames River Postman

Every morning a bright red rowboat may be seen moving about the Thames from London bridge to Wapping, propelled by a single man, who is the postman of the Thames, delivering mail matter to the boats anchored in the stream. The weather has no influence on his trips and often he has some trouble locating the vessels he desires to visit. The craft often move about so that where they were yesterday does not mean that they are there today. Aside from this, his operations are often hampered by fogs, when he is in danger of crashing into some vessel or being crashed into. This position has been held by a member of the same family since 1801.

FIND TRACE OF CULTURED RACE

Discoveries in Nevada Confirm Piute Legend of Lost People.

Reno, Nev.—Legends of the Piute Indians that the Nevada desert was peopled by a strange and wise race thousands of years ago have been partly confirmed by archeological discoveries in a cave in the Humboldt mountains, 22 miles from the town of Lovelock.

Explorers have found thousands of articles left by the forgotten people, including skillfully-woven baskets, flint knives, hatchets and arrow-heads, fur blankets and whistles made from the bones of deer. Among the most beautiful and interesting objects found were several decoy ducks, fashioned with amazing artistry from feathers and tule.

High State of Culture.

Things found in the cave indicate the ancient people had attained a high state of culture and that their knowledge of basket weaving antedated the Pueblo civilization by many hundreds of years. Several mummified skeletons, usually buried with their possessions and wrapped in nets, were found.

Numerous baskets, woven from the skins of meadow mice, were uncovered, together with bows and arrows and other weapons of war and the chase. Most of the relics have been removed to the museum of anthropology at the University of California, but prospectors and desert wanderers tell of similar caves in the isolated Humboldt mountains that show evidence of being the last refuge of the mysterious race.

Many of these caves are marked by drawings, crude pictures and strange characters on surrounding cliffs and canyon walls. All the articles found in the great cave were in an excellent state of preservation, sealed from the ravages of time by the dry climate and protecting dust of the desert.

Destroyed by Neighbors.

The Piutes for generations have handed down the legend of a red-haired people that dominated the desert region in the long ago, when the land was dotted by broad lakes, pleasant rivers and rich verdure. The legend says these people drew upon themselves the wrath of neighboring Indian tribes by raiding their lodges and carrying their young women into captivity.

Some of the most beautiful of the Indian girls, the legend goes, were destined to become the wives of the red-haired warriors and others to be slaves to the women of the strange people.

After many great battles the red-headed people were driven into the caves of the Humboldt range, and when they refused to surrender they were exterminated by fire.

Find New Germ That Proves Foe to Fever

Portland, Ore.—A new germ that may prove highly important in the diagnosis of fever cases has been discovered, according to Dr. Frank W. Hartman, in charge of the Ford hospital laboratories in Detroit, who spoke here recently before the American Society of Clinical Pathologists.

In a paper read before the society, Doctor Hartman disclosed that the new germ had been found as a result of clinical work in the recent epidemic of flu which swept through the eastern States.

"Pfeiffer's bacillus," he said, "generally believed to be the cause of influenza, ordinarily is not fatal to animals. This new organism when tried on animals, however, produces hemorrhagic pneumonia, with death resulting in from 24 to 96 hours."

Six Carloads of Dirt in Air Over Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh.—Between five and six railroad carloads of dust and dirt are in suspension in the Pittsburgh atmosphere, an engineering firm learned in a survey.

The air which moves over the Steel City, 49 square miles (220 feet vertical), contains 5,063 cubic feet of dirt. The survey, which was conducted at a local theater where the air is washed and purified before being sucked into the auditorium and lobbies, disclosed the fact that in the process used 78 per cent of the dirt's impurities is precipitated to the floors of the tanks through which the air passes.

THE BACK WASH

The Skyscraper Murder

by SAMUEL SPEWACK

CHAPTER XXIX.

"WHAT do you want to know?" cried the girl. "I've told you everything."

"Sit down!"

"But I've told you everything."

"Sit down!"

The girl obeyed, watching Marx warily.

"Now!" Marx rubbed his hands, for he faced a delicate third degree. "Let me tell you how you lied. Then you can tell us the truth. To begin with, you didn't come back here the night Sewell was murdered. You came the next day. That was a fake faint you pulled.

"Sewell was here with Major Preston. He sneaked out to see you at the club and then sneaked back again. We know all that. What we want to know is why you deliberately lied to us."

"I had my reasons," the girl looked away.

"Oh, so you admit you lied!" Marx gloated.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"I won't tell you."

"Then what did you do that night?"

"I stayed in my hotel."

"And the next day?"

"I came up here."

"Why?"

"I won't tell you!"

"There's lots of time hanging heavy in the Tombs," said Marx. "Now I'd hate to send a pretty girl down to a cold, dirty place like the Tombs, but if you force me to, why I guess I'll have to."

"One moment," begged the doctor, "perhaps I can help Mrs. Edison out. You had an understanding with Sewell, didn't you?"

The girl looked away.

"An understanding that night. You and Sewell planned something."

The girl didn't answer.

"And your plans didn't come off," said the doctor.

Still the girl said nothing.

"And even now, you don't understand why your plans didn't come off," concluded the doctor. "Something puzzles you. My dear young lady, you have learned already that it doesn't pay to fool the police. Let me advise you to let us have the truth. Come! Sewell left you at the hotel that night, if I recall, and came on here. Your husband followed him. Now, before he left you, what did Sewell say to you?"

The girl seemed to struggle. She looked at Marx, and then at the doctor, and then her head sank into her hands.

"Oh, I might as well tell you," she cried at last. "But, for God's sake, keep it out of the papers."

Both Marx and the doctor quickly promised that.

"I guess it's no secret the way I felt about Sewell." Mrs. Edison smiled somewhat bitterly. "I guess I was a fool. But we did have an understanding. We were going away to Europe together. We'd decided that coming back in the taxi. At least I decided it, and he agreed."

"At once?" interrupted the doctor.

"No," the girl said after a pause. "But I threatened to kill myself if he didn't. I was sick of it. I wanted to get away where we could be together. He said his business wouldn't let him, but that night he agreed. There was a boat sailing the next day at noon. We were to take that."

"Now, exactly what did Sewell say to you? Where would he meet you, and when?"

"We were to meet the next morning at nine. He was going to call for me at my hotel."

"And he didn't."

"He was murdered that night."

"But you know nothing of his death while you waited for him to come?"

"No."

"Didn't see the newspapers by any chance, did you?"

"No."

"So what did you decide to do?"

"I thought I'd better come here. It was the only thing I could do. I thought he had changed his mind again."

"Now tell us exactly what you did, how you got here and why you acted as you did."

The girl paused and then seemed to study the floor. Finally she spoke.

"I'd had a dream that night."

"A dream?"

"Yes. I'd dreamt Sewell was murdered."

Marx sniffed. But the doctor's face was solemn.

"And, of course, when I woke up, I thought it was nerves. But then I got here, and I saw the police, and some one said he'd been murdered. Then I almost went crazy."

"Yes?"

"I just didn't know what to do. Finally I remembered you could get into the apartment through the adjoining house, and so, somehow, I got in that way. And then there were people in the apartment, and I just lay in the alcove until I couldn't stand it any more, and then I came out. And—and——" the girl seemed to sigh in relief—"that's all there is to it."

"Remarkable!" said the doctor.

"I've heard better," said Marx. "Don't you believe me?" the girl cried indignantly.

"No," said Marx. "I guess you need a little prompting. In the first place we know all about the diamond. See?"

"The diamond?"

"Yes, the diamond, and never mind looking so innocent about it. Sewell told you about the Russian diamond, didn't he?"

The girl looked at Marx, then at the doctor, and then her gaze went to the ceiling.

"No."

"Look here!" barked Marx. "I'm not going to stand much more of this. We know when you're lying and when you're telling the truth, and let me tell you that you haven't begun to tell the truth yet. Get that?"

The girl sprang from her chair.

"Sit down!"

"You can't talk to me like that."

"Sit down!"

As if realizing the futility of her struggle, she seated herself once more, bit her lips, and then surveyed her tormentors with hard blue eyes.

"Well," she snapped, "what do you want?"

"Mrs. Edison," began the doctor, "we have reason to believe that you have not told of your exact arrangement with Sewell. I don't wish to appear as threatening as my friend, Inspector Marx, but let me assure you that unless you do show some signs of good faith with us, we'll be compelled to take very harsh measures."

"Do you think I killed him?" she demanded suddenly.

"That's a rhetorical question," said the doctor, "and shall remain unanswered."

"I don't know any more than I've told you."

"Mrs. Edison, you would have us believe that you came to this apartment, knowing that Sewell was murdered, knowing that the police were here, because—you wanted to come. Now, what was the real reason?"

"I told you I was half-crazy."

"But you weren't crazy enough to come to the apartment in the usual fashion. You chose the secret passage from the next house. Am I to believe that when you go insane you still retain all your native caution?"

The girl shook her head defiantly.

"Mrs. Edison, isn't it true that you came back here to get hold of that diamond?"

"Yes," she said finally, after a struggle.

"No," contradicted the doctor, smiling. "You didn't come back for the diamond. You came to this apartment under orders!"

The girl shrank back and looked at the doctor with frightened eyes.

"You obeyed those orders!"

The doctor stood before her, a figure of accusation.

"Who gave you those orders?" the doctor demanded quickly.

The girl had gone pale.

"You know everything," she mocked. "You can tell me that."

"Very well, I shall."

The girl held on to the chair. The doctor waited. The girl seemed to grow rigid in her chair.

"I'll give you one more chance—who gave you those orders?"

"And if I don't tell you?"

The doctor looked at Marx.

"We'll hold you as a material witness, and maybe as an accomplice to this murder, and all your friends won't be able to get you off."

"There you have the alternatives," said the doctor. "You tell the truth and we will shield you from unwelcome publicity. Continue lying, and no one can answer for the consequences. Which shall it be?"

"Let me—let me think it over," the girl stammered finally. Marx and the doctor waited patiently. Ten minutes passed in utter silence, while the girl continued her strange lone debate. Marx lit a fresh cigar. The doctor sat solemnly in his chair, his hands folded.

"Very well," the girl broke the silence. "But I have your promise that nothing will happen to me."

Marx nodded.

"I want it in writing."

"All right," said Marx, and tore a page from his notebook. "How's this: 'In return for valuable information which Mrs. Edison promises to divulge to the police, I guarantee her complete immunity in the Sewell murder'" he paused—"'unless she herself committed the crime.'"

"I don't think we need that proviso," intervened the doctor. "but I don't think Mrs. Edison will object to it."

She shook her head.

"All right," said Marx, handing her the note. "We don't usually do this, but then this isn't a usual case."

The girl took the note, read it carefully and placed it in her purse.

"Very well," she said. "I'll tell you everything. I have lied to you. The night that Sewell met my husband and myself at the night club Sewell had agreed, just as I said, to go with me to Europe. He was going to dispose of the diamond there. I knew some very wealthy Americans living in Paris who would have bought it from him.

"As we were coming back in the taxi, Sewell said he had a strange fear of his life. He told me something of a Russian agent who knew of the stone, and who would kill him if he knew he had it."

THE PLACE OF THE DIRIGIBLE

The globe-circling flight of the Graf Zeppelin is a spectacular and interesting affair—the sort of thing that may well take hold of the public imagination and restore the dirigible to the place it formerly held in the minds of men.

A dozen years ago all speculations about the long-distance commercial aviation dealt exclusively with dirigibles. It was not imagined that the airplane could ever be developed to the point where it could carry enough passengers and cargo to pay its way as a means of transportation.

The development of the airplane however, has been so rapid that the dirigible has been side-tracked—in the popular mind, at any rate. The great achievements of the airplane have made the dirigible look slow, cumbersome and expensive.

There is still a wide field of usefulness for the dirigible, however. The round-the-world flight of the Graf Zeppelin may focus public attention anew on this fact. If so, it will have been a useful trip.

LABOR DAY

Like many of our holidays the original purpose of this day has been lost sight of to a considerable extent. Throngs that fill the railroad stations, roads crowded with automobiles, would suggest that the day had been dedicated to play rather than labor.

To the Knights of Labor we owe the first move to have one day set apart for the claims of labor. Sept. 5, 1882, a great parade was organized by the Central Labor Union of New York City. Later Workingmen's organizations began an agitation to induce state legislatures to declare a legal holiday in the interests of labor. Colorado was the first to enact a law and was followed by other states.

Much has been accomplished in promoting the rights of labor, but there is still a field for the most wise and fair minded administrators and the most loyal and patriotic citizens in efforts to promote justice and a more enlightened policy in the relations of capital and labor. Also there is a wide field for improving the conditions of those outside the ranks of organization, those who are doing a variety of useful and constructive tasks in domestic service of different sorts. Let us remember the children who are already wage earners and all undemanding workers who should be considered that they be not exploited.

Underneath it all there is the thought of the great rhythmic element of life, recurrence of toil, of accomplishment, of playing our part in the orchestra of eternal harmonies. Let us be sure that each one of us in his place is contributing in his own way to this mighty workshop of life. Let us rejoice that we are members of this glorious fellowship.

Thames River Postman

Every morning a bright red row boat may be seen moving about the Thames from London bridge to Wapping, propelled by a single man, who is the postman of the Thames, delivering mail matter to the boats anchored in the stream. The weather has no influence on his trips and often he has some trouble locating the vessel he desires to visit. The craft often move about so that where they were yesterday does not mean that they are there today. Aside from this, his operations are often hampered by fogs, when he is in danger of crashing into some vessel or being crashed into. This position has been held by a member of the same family since 1806.

Not So Good

A fond father who prided himself on his writing ability, being a professional writer, aided his little daughter in preparing a composition on "London" one evening. He edited her sketch and could not refrain from practically rewriting it, adding quite a little polish, he thought. Janey came home the next evening proudly waving her theme. But father felt his feathers fall somewhat when he saw the mark and realized that he had made only A minus in the fifth grade.

FIND TRACE OF CULTURED RACE

Discoveries in Nevada Confirm Piute Legend of Lost People.

Reno, Nev.—Legends of the Piute Indians that the Nevada desert was peopled by a strange and wise race thousands of years ago have been partly confirmed by archeological discoveries in a cave in the Humboldt mountains, 22 miles from the town of Lovelock.

Explorers have found thousands of articles left by the forgotten people, including skillfully-woven baskets, flint knives, hatchets and arrow-heads, fur blankets and whistles made from the bones of deer. Among the most beautiful and interesting objects found were several decoy ducks, fashioned with amazing artistry from feathers and tule.

High State of Culture.

Things found in the cave indicate the ancient people had attained a high state of culture and that their knowledge of basket weaving antedated the Pueblo civilization by many hundreds of years. Several mummified skeletons, usually buried with their possessions and wrapped in nets, were found.

Numerous baskets, woven from the skins of meadow mice, were uncovered, together with bows and arrows and other weapons of war and the chase. Most of the relics have been removed to the museum of anthropology at the University of California, but prospectors and desert wanderers tell of similar caves in the isolated Humboldt mountains that show evidence of being the last refuge of the mysterious race.

Many of these caves are marked by drawings, crude pictures and strange characters on surrounding cliffs and canyon walls. All the articles found in the great cave were in an excellent state of preservation, sealed from the ravages of time by the dry climate and protecting dust of the desert.

Destroyed by Neighbors.

The Piutes for generations have handed down the legend of a red-haired people that dominated the desert region in the long ago, when the land was dotted by broad lakes, pleasant rivers and rich verdure. The legend says these people drew upon themselves the wrath of neighboring Indian tribes by raiding their lodges and carrying their young women into captivity.

Some of the most beautiful of the Indian girls, the legend goes, were destined to become the wives of the red-haired warriors and others to be slaves to the women of the strange people.

After many great battles the red headed people were driven into the caves of the Humboldt range, and when they refused to surrender they were exterminated by fire.

Find New Germ That Proves Foe to Fever

Portland, Ore.—A new germ that may prove highly important in the diagnosis of fever cases has been discovered, according to Dr. Frank W. Hartman, in charge of the Ford hospital laboratories in Detroit, who spoke here recently before the American Society of Clinical Pathologists.

In a paper read before the society, Doctor Hartman disclosed that the new germ had been found as a result of clinical work in the recent epidemic of flu which swept through the eastern States.

"Pfeffer's baccillus," he said, "generally believed to be the cause of influenza, ordinarily is not fatal to animals. This new organism when tried on animals, however, produces hemorrhagic pneumonia, with death resulting in from 24 to 96 hours."

Six Carloads of Dirt in Air Over Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh.—Between five and six railroad carloads of dust and dirt are in suspension in the Pittsburgh atmosphere, an engineering firm learned in a survey.

The air which moves over the Steel City, 49 square miles (220 feet vertical), contains 5,103 cubic feet of dirt. The survey, which was conducted at a local theater where the air is washed and purified before being sucked into the auditorium and lobbies, disclosed the fact that in the process used 98 per cent of the air's impurities is precipitated to the floors of the tanks through which the air passes.

Diving Helmet Helps Boy Find Golf Balls

Dallas, Texas.—A homemade diving headgear, developed by the trial and error method from a tin bucket, is the "get rich quick" apparatus of Clarence Chandler, fifteen, Dallas school youth.

Chandler has discovered he can lower himself to a depth of 50 feet in water with the bucket on his head, pick up enough golf balls in an hour to keep him rich for a week, and when golf lakes are drained of balls, move on to other lakes where sunken motor boats and outboard racers can be brought to the surface.

The youth's first idea for his invention came from his mother's kitchen when he saw her submerge glasses, bottom-up into the rinsing pans without the glasses filling with water.

THE BACK WASH

The Skyscraper Murder
by SAMUEL SPEWACK

CHAPTER XXIX.

"WHAT do you want to know?" cried the girl. "I've told you everything."

"Sit down!"

"But I've told you everything."

"Sit down!"

The girl obeyed, watching Marx warily.

"Now!" Marx rubbed his hands, for he faced a delicate third degree. "Let me tell you how you lied. Then you can tell us the truth. To begin with, you didn't come back here the night Sewell was murdered. You came the next day. That was a fake faint you pulled.

"Sewell was here with Major Preston. He sneaked out to see you at the club and then sneaked back again. We know all that. What we want to know is why you deliberately lied to us."

"I had my reasons," the girl looked away.

"Oh, so you admit you lied!" Marx gloated.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"I won't tell you."

"Then what did you do that night?"

"I stayed in my hotel."

"And the next day?"

"I came up here."

"Why?"

"I won't tell you!"

"There's lots of time hanging heavy in the Tombs," said Marx. "Now I'd hate to send a pretty girl down to a cold, dirty place like the Tombs, but if you force me to, why I guess I'll have to."

"One moment," begged the doctor, "perhaps I can help Mrs. Edison out. You had an understanding with Sewell, didn't you?"

The girl looked away.

"An understanding that night. You and Sewell planned something."

The girl didn't answer.

"And your plans didn't come off," said the doctor.

Still the girl said nothing.

"And even now, you don't understand why your plans didn't come off," concluded the doctor. "Something puzzles you. My dear young lady, you have learned already that it doesn't pay to fool the police. Let me advise you to let us have the truth. Come! Sewell left you at the hotel that night, if I recall, and came on here. Your husband followed him. Now, before he left you, what did Sewell say to you?"

The girl seemed to struggle. She looked at Marx, and then at the doctor, and then her head sank into her hands.

"Oh, I might as well tell you," she cried at last. "But, for God's sake, keep it out of the papers."

Both Marx and the doctor quickly promised that.

"I guess it's no secret the way I felt about Sewell," Mrs. Edison smiled somewhat bitterly. "I guess I was a fool. But we did have an understanding. We were going away to Europe together. We'd decided that coming back in the taxi. At least I decided it, and he agreed."

"At once?" interrupted the doctor.

"No," the girl said after a pause. "But I threatened to kill myself if he didn't. I was sick of it. I wanted to get away where we could be together. He said his business wouldn't let him, but that night he agreed. There was a boat sailing the next day at noon. We were to take that."

"Now, exactly what did Sewell say to you? Where would he meet you, and when?"

"We were to meet the next morning at nine. He was going to call for me at my hotel."

"And he didn't."

"He was murdered that night."

"But you know nothing of his death while you waited for him to come?"

"No."

"Didn't see the newspapers by any chance, did you?"

"No."

"So what did you decide to do?"

"I thought I'd better come here. It was the only thing I could do. I thought he had changed his mind again."

"Now tell us exactly what you did, how you got here and why you acted as you did."

The girl paused and then seemed to study the floor. Finally she spoke.

"I'd had a dream that night."

"A dream?"

"Yes. I'd dreamt Sewell was murdered."

Marx sniffed. But the doctor's face was solemn.

"And, of course, when I woke up, I thought it was nerves. But then I got here, and I saw the police, and some one said he'd been murdered. Then I almost went crazy."

"Yes?"

"I just didn't know what to do. Finally I remembered you could get into the apartment through the adjoining house, and so, somehow, I got in that way. And then there were people in the apartment, and I just lay in the alcove until I couldn't stand it any more, and then I came out. And—and——" the girl seemed to sigh in relief—"that's all there is to it."

"Remarkable!" said the doctor.

"I've heard better," said Marx.

"Don't you believe me?" the girl cried indignantly.

"No," said Marx. "I guess you need a little prompting. In the first place we know all about the diamond. See?"

"The diamond?"

"Yes, the diamond, and never mind looking so innocent about it. Sewell told you about the Russian diamond, didn't he?"

The girl looked at Marx, then at the doctor, and then her gaze went to the ceiling.

"No."

"Look here!" barked Marx. "I'm not going to stand much more of this. We know when you're lying and when you're telling the truth, and let me tell you that you haven't begun to tell the truth yet. Get that?"

The girl sprang from her chair.

"Sit down!"

"You can't talk to me like that."

"Sit down!"

As if realizing the futility of her struggle, she seated herself once more, bit her lips, and then surveyed her tormentors with hard blue eyes.

"Well," she snapped, "what do you want?"

"Mrs. Edison," began the doctor, "we have reason to believe that you have not told of your exact arrangement with Sewell. I don't wish to appear as threatening as my friend, Inspector Marx, but let me assure you that unless you do show some signs of good faith with us, we'll be compelled to take very harsh measures."

"Do you think I killed him?" she demanded suddenly.

"That's a rhetorical question," said the doctor, "and shall remain unanswered."

"I don't know any more than I've told you."

"Mrs. Edison, you would have us believe that you came to this apartment, knowing that Sewell was murdered, knowing that the police were here, because—you wanted to come. Now, what was the real reason?"

"I told you I was half-crazy."

"But you weren't crazy enough to come to the apartment in the usual fashion. You chose the secret passage from the next house. Am I to believe that when you go insane you still retain all your native caution?"

The girl shook her head defiantly.

"Mrs. Edison, isn't it true that you came back here to get hold of that diamond?"

"Yes," she said finally, after a struggle.

"No," contradicted the doctor, smiling. "You didn't come back for the diamond. You came to this apartment under orders!"

The girl shrank back and looked at the doctor with frightened eyes.

"You obeyed those orders!"

The doctor stood before her, a figure of accusation.

"Who gave you those orders?" the doctor demanded quickly.

The girl had gone pale.

"You know everything," she mocked. "You can tell me that."

"Very well, I shall."

The girl held on to the chair. The doctor waited. The girl seemed to grow rigid in her chair.

"I'll give you one more chance—who gave you those orders?"

"And if I don't tell you?"

The doctor looked at Marx.

"We'll hold you as a material witness, and maybe as an accomplice to this murder, and all your friends won't be able to get you off."

"There you have the alternatives," said the doctor. "You tell the truth and we will shield you from unwelcome publicity. Continue lying, and no one can answer for the consequences. Which shall it be?"

"Let me—let me think it over," the girl stammered finally. Marx and the doctor waited patiently. Ten minutes passed in utter silence, while the girl continued her strange lone debate. Marx lit a fresh cigar. The doctor sat solemnly in his chair, his hands folded.

"Very well," the girl broke the silence. "But I have your promise that nothing will happen to me."

Marx nodded.

"I want it in writing."

"All right," said Marx, and tore a page from his notebook. "How's this: 'In return for valuable information which Mrs. Edison promises to divulge to the police, I guarantee her complete immunity in the Sewell murder'" he paused—"'unless she herself committed the crime.'"

"I don't think we need that proviso," intervened the doctor, "but I don't think Mrs. Edison will object to it."

She shook her head.

"All right," said Marx, handing her the note. "We don't usually do this, but then this isn't a usual case."

The girl took the note, read it carefully and placed it in her purse.

"Very well," she said. "I'll tell you everything. I have lied to you. The night that Sewell met my husband and myself at the night club. Sewell had agreed, just as I said, to go with me to Europe. He was going to dispose of the diamond there. I knew some very wealthy Americans living in Paris who would have bought it from him.

"As we were coming back in the taxi, Sewell said he had a strange fear of his life. He told me something of a Russian agent who knew of the stone, and who would kill him if he knew he had it."

The sinking vessel formed a whirlpool which probably sucked down many who were thrown or managed to make their way clear of the doomed vessel.

Radio reports said those picked up were injured and in an exhausted state. They were unable to give much detail of the disaster, other than there was a rending crash as the vessels collided, tearing a yawning hole in the wooden hull of the San Juan. It began to go down immediately and three minutes afterward had disappeared.

It was believed that the San Juan must have been rammed amidship and cut almost in two to have gone down so quickly.

Worcester Annoyed by Exuberance of Youth

One has but to delve into biography to discover that even the great were beset with human frailties just like less famous mortals The daughter of the poet Longfellow, in her memoirs tells how the children kept the community on edge

Longfellow's neighbors did not invariably share his indulgence toward his children The lexicographer, Worcester, was a next door neighbor in Cambridge. A little pond, where the children skated, lay between the two places The boys, of course were noisy which was not minded at home.

But dictionary making is not like poetry and the dignified Worcester disturbed, frequently came down and chased the children off his end of the pond, ordering them, in words not to be found in his dictionary, to keep their racket at home.

When Teeth Were Weapons

Most of us, from our earliest days, are at intervals gravely troubled by our teeth. It was not always so.

The jawbone of the Heidelberg man, who walked this earth about 50,000 years ago, is placed alongside that of modern man. We realize that our antediefers, as the Germans call them, are but as toys when compared with those of our earliest ancestors.

The jawbones of still more ancient people than the Heidelberg race were even more formidable, as they were provided with projecting teeth, which, without much doubt were used in fighting and in other manly sports of those days.

Keep Open Heart

We should always have in our heads one free and open corner, where we can give place or lodging, as they pass, to the ideas of our friends. It really becomes unbearable to converse with men whose brains are divided up into well-filled pigeon holes wherein nothing can enter from the outside Let us have hospitable minds and hearts.

Aids American Jews

Paul Knabenshue, United States Consul to Jerusalem, has his hands full trying to aid the American Jews in the Palestine. Twelve Americans have been killed and many more wounded in the heavy fighting between Jews and Arab tribesmen.

"Fistic Art" Had Origin in Days of Barbarism

Although boxing as a science is relatively modern, it was in the blazing sun of Italy and Greece, in the great amphitheaters of long ago where barbarian captives fought and died to tickle the fancy of the populace, that boxing as a sport was born. That these people must have developed a skillful school of boxing during the period in which the cestus was used is certain, but unfortunately little is known either of the style of fighting or of the personal attributes of the boxer by which a comparison can be made between those long-dead champions and the modern wielder of the padded glove. The nearest connecting link is the famous Greek statue chiseled in time defying marble known as "The Boxer." This, at least, affords a study in character.

During the early part of the Eighteenth century in England boxing was about as inhuman a sport as one can imagine. The middle of the century, fortunately, saw the dawn of a new day for the boxer, for at this time Jack Broughton, a young English champion, invented boxing gloves and originated a code of rules prohibiting much of the former savagery of the sport, on which many of the future rules have been based.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Most of the credit for the idea of manufacturing artificial silk goes to France, and the honor has usually been given to Reaumur, a French naturalist. Actually, the first known suggestion was made by an Englishman, Dr. Robert Hook. In 1664 he published a book, "Micrographia," in which he described a microscopic examination of real silk, and suggested the possibility of producing a similar thread by mechanical means. The first machine to produce an artificial thread was made in England In 1840 Mr. Louis Schwabe took out the first patent and erected his machine, embodying spinnerettes, in Manchester, but the product failed to attract, and Schwabe committed suicide three years later. Today the spinnerette is in full use and £135,000,000 is invested in the industry in England alone.

In 1664 he published a book, "Micrographia," in which he described a microscopic examination of real silk, and suggested the possibility of producing a similar thread by mechanical means. The first machine to produce an artificial thread was made in England In 1840 Mr. Louis Schwabe took out the first patent and erected his machine, embodying spinnerettes, in Manchester, but the product failed to attract, and Schwabe committed suicide three years later. Today the spinnerette is in full use and £135,000,000 is invested in the industry in England alone.

SHELL CO. BUYS 2 OIL CONCERNS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30—The Shell Petroleum Corporation, with headquarters here and operating in 25 middle western states, announced today that it had purchased the Western Oil Refining Co., of Indianapolis, and the Columbus Oil Co., of Columbus, Ohio, marketers of Silver Flash gasoline.

As a result of the transaction, the Shell company assumes direct management of 185 Silver Flash service stations in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois previously owned by the two companies which have been purchased. In addition, the Shell company will be able to market its products through a large number of independent resellers who have been associated with the Western and Columbus companies.

According to Shell officials in St. Louis, the transaction, involving annual gasoline sales amounting to 45,000,000 gallons, is one of the largest of its kind ever consummated in the petroleum industry.

YOUNG DODGER PLAYER RUINS NO HIT GAME

Brooklyn Star Shatters Dream of Giant Pitcher—Bucs Beat Cubs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Art has no place in baseball, at least for Johnny Frederick, youthful Brooklyn star.

As witness his performance yesterday. Pitcher Bill Walker of the Giants for eight innings had done a flawless piece of work in carving a bust of himself in the no-hit hall of fame, when up came Mr. Frederick in the ninth. A lazy double drifted off his bat and Sculptor Walker's work of art lay crumpled at his feet. What balm he received came from the fact that his Giants had whipped their hated rivals, 6 to 2, and he had allowed but four hits all of which came after Frederick's fatal blow.

CUBS BEAT AGAIN

No art in Pittsburgh. Nothing but the resounding rings of bats as the rejuvenated Pirates waded into the haughty Cubs and laid them low for a third time in a row. This time by 5 to 4. Faced by nine right-handed hitters, Southpaw Jess Petty let the Cubs hit when nothing was at stake and applied the screws when men were on bases. Chicago now leads but by 11¼ games.

Pitcher Benge awed his Boston gallery by rapping a single in the 10th with the bases loaded—two scored—and the Phillies eased out a 5 to 4 winner. Only three games were scheduled in the National.

RUTH GETS NO. 37.

Washington's last visit to the Yankees began with a double-header. Each team took its turn in tasting victory, the Yanks in the first game, 5 to 4, and the Senators a little later, 8 to 4. Goose Goslin broke a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning of the opener with a blast into the right field bleachers which, followed by three singles, gave Washington two runs. The Yanks came up. With two on Commander Hugo Ruth unhoused his Graf bat and the little white ball made a perfect take off and a neat landing in the bleachers. Goslin's work was trumped and the game won for Huggins. It was Commander Ruth's 37th flight of the year. The second game found Hoyt, Moore and Nekola unable to stem the Senator tide.

Back from a disastrous tour of the West the league-leading Athletics made the home folks happy by whipping Boston, 7 to 6. The Red Sox helped the A's no little, obliging with three errors in the seventh. The Mackmen now lead by 13½ games.

Sad Sam Gray shut-out the Tigers while his St. Louis comrades blasted Whitehill for a 6 to 0 victory.

Chicago eased a run over the plate in the ninth to trim Cleveland, 2 to 1, thus giving Ted Lyons another win and Willis Hudlin another loss.

Animals and Reptiles Worshipped by Mankind

It is a fact that cows, on account of their supposedly sacred character, are allowed to roam at will in India, but the animals are venerated or respected rather than actually worshipped. Real worship of cattle, however, has existed at other periods of the world's history. It was common among the ancient Egyptians, who possessed the cult of the bull Apis. When one representative of Apis died, a new bull was sought and especially educated in sacred matters for four months. Celebration of its birth day was held annually, with sacrifices of white oxen, and it was unlawful for women to go near it. Apis was supposed to have oracular powers, and after death, was mummified. Another animal that has received great respect has been the white elephant, which is believed in Siam, to carry a dead man's soul. It cannot be purchased, and feasts are held for it and a funeral when it dies. But perhaps the most feared and respected of all is the serpent. At Whydah, in Africa, there is a serpent temple, and these reptiles in many parts of Africa are regarded as incarnations of dead relatives.

Shocked

At an Uplifters club luncheon some one happened to remark that polo had come to us from France and not from England via India. The informant declared that mention of it had been made by several noted French writers. Evidently in the hope of verifying her statement, she turned to a young lady who at that moment joined the party and asked:

"Are you familiar with Victor Hugo?"

"I am never familiar with any man," replied the newcomer with dignity.—Los Angeles Times.

GAMES TONIGHT

Motor Transport vs C. A. C. at Mason's Park.

Coca Colas vs Circleville Merchants.

By defeating the Motor Transport Thursday evening by the score of 4 to 1, the Pettit Tires advanced into fourth place and will probably remain there. This was a fast and furious game, as the Tires started in the first inning scoring a run and giving the army boys something to work for. Although the game was played very close on both sides, probably a few errors on the part of the Transports, especially the shortstops and catcher, lost the game. The Transports will have another chance to crawl up to fourth place again tonight if they defeat the C. A. C.

The Recreation ball games are now coming to their final stage and if the Coca Colas lose tonight the Ohio Utilities team will be the champions of the league while on the other hand if the Colos win they will be thrown into a tie for first place with the Utilities team and will have to play off this tie. The game will probably be played Tuesday. Public opinion throughout the whole season was that the Cokes had the pennant cinched and there was no need of trying, but during the past few weeks many of the fans have had their minds changed.

Snakes Not Aggressive; Called Lazy and Timid

"Contrary to lore, snakes do not attack humans wantonly," reads an article in the news magazine Time. "They are lazy and timid and do not strike unless hurt or threatened with hurt," the article continues.

"Exceptions are the African mamba, the Malayan king, the bush master of the tropics, and cascavel, a rattler of Central America. A coachwhip will sometimes follow a man. But it is only curious, and will speed away if threatened."

Other facts about snakes are given in Time as follows: "Identifying poisonous snakes is easy. Most of them belong to the pit-viper family. They have a deep depression between the eye and nostril. Heads are flat and triangular, necks thin, bodies stout; tails short, eyes with elliptical pupils like a cat's. Fangs fold back against the roof of the mouth. A single row of scales runs along the belly. The biggest United States snake is the eastern diamond-back rattler, which grows to nine feet."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

GOOD BATTLES SEEN AT PARK

Johnny Kain and Watson Brown Fight To Draw In Main Bout Thursday.

When the last bout at Scippo Park ended Thursday night everyone present declared that they received their quarter's worth. In the main go Johnny Kain, of Williamsport, fought to a draw with Watson Brown, of Circleville. This bout was good as both of these boys put forth their best efforts and pleased the crowd to the utmost. Both had a terrific reach and didn't hesitate to use it. Kain persisted in using his knees in the in-fighting and had to be warned by the referee.

The semi-final was between Kid Cupp, of Circleville and Roy McQuade, of Circleville. McQuade gained the decision but not until he had received some of Cupp's dynamic jolts, that seemed to make him falter. Cupp put up a good scrap, although he did not win.

The first bout was between Kid Beck and Mickey Brannon, both of Circleville. Beck again came out on top with a knock-out in the third round. Brannon was ready to quit in the first stanza, but Beck would not let him and made him fight back. Beck and Cupp are both fast becoming favorites among local fight fans who are looking forward to better results from these boys.

"NEW KONJOLA RESTORED ME TO HEALTH!"

Victim of Stomach and Other Troubles Says New Compound Gave Him His Only Relief.

MICHAEL J. ANDREWS.

"Konjola ended my suffering, and I am truly grateful," said Mr. Michael J. Andrews, 3001 Poe Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. "For eight years I suffered from stomach trouble and other ills. My stomach hurt me all the time, and I often coughed up bits of partly digested food. Backache was another source of misery and I had to get up frequently at night on account of bladder actions.

"But after all the other medicines I tried failed, Konjola scored a fine victory. In a remarkably short time all my health troubles had disappeared. My appetite is excellent, my digestion perfect, and my kidneys restored to their normal, healthy condition. I am feeling better than I have for ten years. No wonder I am an enthusiastic Konjola booster."

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throught this entire section.—Adv.

RUTH GETS NO. 37.

Washington's last visit to the Yankees began with a double-header. Each team took its turn in tasting victory, the Yanks in the first game, 5 to 4, and the Senators a little later, 8 to 4. Goose Goslin broke a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning of the opener with a blast into the right field bleachers which, followed by three singles, gave Washington two runs. The Yanks came up. With two on Commander Hugo Ruth unhoused his Graf bat and the little white ball made a perfect take off and a neat landing in the bleachers. Goslin's work was trumped and the game won for Huggins. It was Commander Ruth's 37th flight of the year. The second game found Hoyt, Moore and Nekola unable to stem the Senator tide.

Back from a disastrous tour of the West the league-leading Athletics made the home folks happy by whipping Boston, 7 to 6. The Red Sox helped the A's no little, obliging with three errors in the seventh. The Mackmen now lead by 13¼ games.

Sad Sam Gray shut-out the Tigers while his St. Louis comrades blasted Whitehill for a 6 to 0 victory.

Chicago eased a run over the plate in the ninth to trim Cleveland, 2 to 1, thus giving Ted Lyons another win and Willis Hudlin another loss.

Animals and Reptiles Worshipped by Mankind

It is a fact that cows, on account of their supposedly sacred character, are allowed to roam at will in India, but the animals are venerated or respected rather than actually worshipped. Real worship of cattle, however, has existed at other periods of the world's history. It was common among the ancient Egyptians, who possessed the cult of the bull Apis. When one representative of Apis died, a new bull was sought and especially educated in sacred matters for four months. Celebration of its birth day was held annually, with sacrifices of white oxen, and it was unlawful for women to go near it. Apis was supposed to have oracular powers, and after death, was mummified. Another animal that has received great respect has been the white elephant, which is believed in Siam, to carry a dead man's soul. It cannot be purchased, and feasts are held for it and a funeral when it dies. But perhaps the most feared and respected of all is the serpent. At Whydah, in Africa, there is a serpent temple, and these reptiles in many parts of Africa are regarded as incarnations of dead relatives.

Shocked

At an Uplifters club luncheon some one happened to remark that polo had come to us from France and not from England via India. The informant declared that mention of it had been made by several noted French writers. Evidently in the hope of verifying her statement, she turned to a young lady who at that moment joined the party and asked:

"Are you familiar with Victor Hugo?"

"I am never familiar with any man," replied the newcomer with dignity.—Los Angeles Times.

"NEW KONJOLA RESTORED ME TO HEALTH!"

Victim of Stomach and Other Troubles Says New Compound Gave Him His Only Relief.

MICHAEL J. ANDREWS.

"Konjola ended my suffering, and I am truly grateful," said Mr. Michael J. Andrews, 3001 Poe Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. "For eight years I suffered from stomach trouble and other ills. My stomach hurt me all the time, and I often coughed up bits of partly digested food. Backache was another source of misery and I had to get up frequently at night on account of bladder actions.

"But after all the other medicines I tried failed, Konjola scored a fine victory. In a remarkably short time all my health troubles had disappeared. My appetite is excellent, my digestion perfect, and my kidneys restored to their normal, healthy condition. I am feeling better than I have for ten years. No wonder I am an enthusiastic Konjola booster."

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throught this entire section.—Adv.

SCORES THURSDAY

Pettit Tires, 4; Motor Transport 1.

GAMES TONIGHT

Motor Transport vs C. A. C. at Mason's Park.

Coca Colas vs Circleville Merchants.

By defeating the Motor Transport Thursday evening by the score of 4 to 1, the Pettit Tires advanced into fourth place and will probably remain there. This was a fast and furious game, as the Tires started in the first inning scoring a run and giving the army boys something to work for. Although the game was played very close on both sides, probably a few errors on the part of the Transports, especially the shortstops and catcher, lost the game. The Transports will have another chance to crawl up to fourth place again tonight if they defeat the C. A. C.

The Recreation ball games are now coming to their final stage and if the Coca Colas lose tonight the Ohio Utilities team will be the champions of the league while on the other hand if the Colos win they will be thrown into a tie for first place with the Utilities team and will have to play off this tie. The game will probably be played Tuesday. Public opinion throughout the whole season was that the Cokes had the pennant cinched and there was no need of trying, but during the past few weeks many of the fans have had their minds changed.

Snakes Not Aggressive; Called Lazy and Timid

"Contrary to lore, snakes do not attack humans wantonly," reads an article in the news magazine Time.

"They are lazy and timid and do not strike unless hurt or threatened with hurt," the article continues.

"Exceptions are the African mamba, the Malayan king, the bushmaster of the tropics, and cascavel, a rattler of Central America. A coachwhip will sometimes follow a man. But it is only curious, and will speed away if threatened."

Other facts about snakes are given in Time as follows: "Identifying poisonous snakes is easy. Most of them belong to the pit-viper family. They have a deep depression between the eye and nostril. Heads are flat and triangular, necks thin, bodies stout; tails short, eyes with elliptical pupils like a cat's. Fangs fold back against the roof of the mouth. A single row of scales runs along the belly. The biggest United States snake is the eastern diamond-back rattler, which grows to nine feet."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

GOOD BATTLES SEEN AT PARK

Johnny Kain and Watson Brown Fight To Draw In Main Bout Thursday.

When the last bout at Scippo Park ended Thursday night everyone present declared that they received their quarter's worth. In the main go Johnny Kain, of Williamsport, fought to a draw with Watson Brown, of Circleville. This bout was good as both of these boys put forth their best efforts and pleased the crowd to the utmost. Both had a terrific reach and didn't hesitate to use it. Kain persisted in using his knees in the in-fighting and had to be warned by the referee.

The semi-final was between Kid Cupp, of Circleville and Roy McQuade, of Circleville. McQuade gained the decision but not until he had received some of Cupp's dynamic jolts, that seemed to make him falter. Cupp put up a good scrap, although he did not win.

The first bout was between Kid Beck and Mickey Brannon, both of Circleville. Beck again came out on top with a knock-out in the third round. Brannon was ready to quit in the first stanza, but Beck would not let him and made him fight back. Beck and Cupp are both fast becoming favorites among local fight fans who are looking forward to better results from these boys.

Balsa Lightest of Woods

Balsa (Ochroma lagopus), called guano in Porto Rico and lanera in Cuba, is a common tree, particularly along the seashores in the West Indies and Central America. It is said to be called moho in British Honduras, lanilla in Guatemala and guano in Spanish Honduras. The tree is rarely more than 40 or 50 feet in height and the trunk is sometimes from four to five feet in diameter. The wood of balsa is nearly white or sometimes tinted with red, showing practically no distinction between heartwood and sapwood. It has a silky texture, is rather coarse but straight grained, and is the lightest of all woods, even lighter than true cork. A sample of balsa from Trinidad exhibited at Philadelphia in 1876 had a specific gravity of .120, or about 7½ pounds per cubic foot.

Primitive Ideas Still Prevail in Mourning

Most of our funeral customs go back to primitive times when it was believed there was danger to all except priests who had to do with a corpse, and death witchery was accepted without question. Some primitive peoples destroyed everything associated with a funeral, even going so far as to tear down the house in which the death occurred. Some of these customs have survived as marks of respect for the departed, as has the practice of removing all ornaments and ceasing all activities marking the ordinary pursuits of life. In some churches altars are stripped on Good Friday in observance of the anniversary of the crucifixion of Christ. There is a tradition in some communities that the clock stops when there is a death in the household. Mirrors are usually associated with vanity and other light attributes regarded as not in keeping with the mourning spirit in the presence of death. Hence they are covered to contribute to the gloom and hush of mourning.

Balsa Lightest of Woods

Balsa (Ochroma lagopus), called goano in Porto Rico and lanera in Cuba, is a common tree, particularly along the seashores in the West Indies and Central America. It is said to be called moho in British Honduras, lanilla in Guatemala and guano in Spanish Honduras. The tree is rarely more than 40 or 50 feet in height and the trunk is sometimes from four to five feet in diameter. The wood of balsa is nearly white or sometimes tinted with red, showing practically no distinction between heartwood and sapwood. It has a silky texture, is rather coarse but straight grained, and is the lightest of all woods, even lighter than true cork. A sample of balsa from Trinidad exhibited at Philadelphia in 1876 had a specific gravity of .120, or about 7½ pounds per cubic foot.

Primitive Ideas Still Prevail in Mourning

Most of our funeral customs go back to primitive times when it was believed there was danger to all except priests who had to do with a corpse, and death witchery was accepted without question. Some primitive peoples destroyed everything associated with a funeral, even going so far as to tear down the house in which the death occurred. Some of these customs have survived as marks of respect for the departed, as has the practice of removing all ornaments and ceasing all activities marking the ordinary pursuits of life. In some churches altars are stripped on Good Friday in observance of the anniversary of the crucifixion of Christ. There is a tradition in some communities that the clock stops when there is a death in the household. Mirrors are usually associated with vanity and other light attributes regarded as not in keeping with the mourning spirit in the presence of death. Hence they are covered to contribute to the gloom and hush of mourning.
